

A photograph of three men standing in a lush green field. The man on the left is wearing a dark vest and glasses. The man in the middle is wearing a dark jacket and holding a white bucket containing a green liquid. The man on the right is wearing a light-colored jacket and a cap, and is gesturing with his hands. The background shows rolling green hills under a cloudy sky.

Nutrition. Stimulation. Protection.

A professional portrait of Jörg Meyer, Founder and CEO, set against a warehouse background. The man is wearing a dark blue suit, a white shirt, and a red patterned tie. He is standing in front of a large warehouse with high ceilings and skylights. In the background, there are tall blue metal shelving units filled with white boxes. A yellow forklift is parked near a pallet loaded with a stack of cardboard boxes. The text "WE MAKE" is overlaid in large, bold, red capital letters.

A close-up photograph of a wheat head. The wheat is golden-brown, indicating it is ripe. The spikelet, which is the central part of the head where the grains develop, is a dark, almost black color, contrasting sharply with the lighter, golden-brown awns and glumes. This darkening is a visual indicator of a fungal infection, likely Fusarium head blight (FHB), which is a common biotic stress in wheat. The background is a soft-focus field of similar wheat stalks.

BIOTIC STRESS RESISTANCE

A young green plant with several thin, upright leaves is growing out of a crack in dry, cracked soil. The soil is light brown and shows deep, irregular cracks. The plant is vibrant green, contrasting with the dry, cracked earth. The background is slightly blurred, showing more of the cracked soil.
